

Fact sheet on Inspiration search

Literature search guide. First element, sub-element 1

Tools

Library catalogues and indexes to records are suitable tools for inspiration searches, however subject databases etc. are also usable). You may use:

AU Library's catalogue

The library's books and journals (4 million); Danish and international academic articles (87 million); and AU research etc. You may search the material the library has purchased for use in the areas of research and education at AU.

However, keywords are only available in a minor part of the posts. There are some options for narrowing your search results.

Bibliotek.dk

All books and journals at Danish libraries; Danish journal articles since 1945.

Keywords are available in a large part of the posts. There are some options for narrowing your search results.

Google Scholar

Google's search engine, which harvests data from scientific websites only – Danish and international (including all material from AU Library and other Danish research libraries). The coverage rate is not known.

Google Scholar offers no option for narrowing and refining your searches. However, the relevance ranking is good.
